

THE WBUR POP-UP SHOP

Last chance to broadcast your love for WBUR with limited edition summer items. Ends 8/24.

SHOP NOW

wbur

CommonHealth

Opioid Law Is A 'Blueprint' For The Nation, Gov. Baker Says At Ceremonial Signing

August 14, 2018

By Chris Triunfo, State House News Service

After launching his re-election campaign over the weekend, Gov. Charlie Baker drew attention Tuesday to legislation that aims to expand treatment for opioid addiction across the state.

The law, which Baker signed last week, is one of the success stories to come out of the Legislature in the closing, harried days of formal sessions in July, when some initiatives, including health care and education funding reforms, fell apart.

The opioid bill has been touted by the governor's re-election campaign as another step taken in curtailing the opioid epidemic. Since Baker took office in 2015, this is the second major bill he has signed to fight the crisis that claimed an estimated 2,016 lives in 2017. He marked the occasion Tuesday with a ceremonial signing at a Roxbury recovery center.

Baker was joined by House Speaker Robert DeLeo, Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito, Secretary of Health and Human Services Marylou Sudders and various members of the Legislature who played a role in passing the law. The governor said the efforts in Massachusetts are being replicated by other states around the country.

"This legislation has been used as a blueprint for fighting the epidemic in [46] states," Baker told the crowded room. "It's truly a team effort, and there's a lot more to be done."

At a picnic event in Shrewsbury on Saturday, Baker addressed the work his administration has done and what he sees as left to do to combat the drug crisis.

"We're talking today about a second term. Why? Because there are some things we want to finish the job," Baker told the crowd at the annual Baker-Polito Picnic. "While we have seen for the first time in decades a drop in the number of people dying and the number of people receiving opioid prescriptions and major expansions in our capacity to treat people, we are nowhere near finished on this. We have a long way to go. We need four more years to build on the success of the first four so that we can beat this scourge into the ground once and for all."

Most Viewed Stories

Pawtucket Red Sox Reach Tentative Deal To Move To Worcester

Bostonomix Aug 16, 2018

How Do You Break A Dry Spaghetti Noodle Into Just 2 Pieces? There's A Twist

WBUR News Aug 16, 2018

Worcester's Play For The PawSox Stirs Good And Bad Memories

Bostonomix 04:15 Aug 16, 2018

Shark Attacks Swimmer On Cape Cod, Punctures Man's Torso And Legs

WBUR News Aug 15, 2018

The law will expand access to the overdose reversing drug Narcan, require all prescribers to convert to secure electronic prescriptions by 2020, and take a step toward credentialing recovery coaches.

Earlier in the month, the Senate scrapped a Ways and Means Committee proposal to established supervised injection sites as part of its version of bill, instead adopting an amendment to study the idea.

Supporters retreated after U.S. Attorney Andrew Lelling made clear that such facilities would violate federal law and anyone working at or using one of the sites could be subject to federal criminal charges.

State Sen. Cindy Friedman took the lead for the Senate in negotiations over a final bill. Despite supporting proposals such as supervised injection sites that were opposed by the administration, the Arlington Democrat on Tuesday had nothing but kind words for Baker.

"There was never a time where we couldn't sit down and have a real conversation to get to yes," Friedman said.

Baker also cited the collaboration between the branches and his administration as essential in the passage of the bill, even though he didn't get everything he had proposed. Most notably, the Legislature did not adopt the governor's proposal to allow doctors to order the involuntary transfer of a patient for treatment for 72 hours.

"It was very much a team effort between our administration, the secretary and our colleagues in the Legislature," Baker said.

The governor spent Monday in Vermont at the annual New England Governors/Eastern Canadian Premiers Conference, making the ceremonial signing his first official public event in Massachusetts since the formal launch of his re-election campaign.

Also in attendance was Middlesex Sheriff Peter Koutoujian, who worked with Friedman and Rep. Denise Garlick to establish medically-assisted substance abuse treatment for incoming prisoners at Cedar Junction and allow detainees and prisoners at the Massachusetts Alcohol and Substance Abuse Center in Plymouth, the women's correctional facility at Framingham and the South Middlesex correctional center who were receiving medication-assisted treatment to continue that course of therapy while behind bars unless it is deemed no longer medically necessary.

As the governor touted the recovery efforts being pursued by the sheriff, Scott Francis, who works with the STEPPOX Recovery Support Center in Roxbury where the event was being held, yelled out, "Recovery is real!"

Related:

- Gov. Baker Signs 53 Bills — Including Ones On Clean Energy And Opioid Treatment — Into Law
- 'Supervised Injection Sites Are A Terrible Idea,' U.S. Attorney Lelling Says

2 Join the discussion

View comment\(s\)

Our Best Health Reporting Delivered Right To Your Inbox

Sign up for the CommonHealth newsletter to receive a weekly digest of WBUR's best health, medicine and science coverage.

More from WBUR

Mass. Primary Candidates Get Ready For Home Stretch

Time is running out for candidates in Massachusetts primary contests to win over voters and get their names out. Candidates in most contests have had a busy week of trying...

WBUR News 05:22 3 hours ago

MBTA Buses Would Honor Rosa Parks Annually Under Bill

All MBTA buses would display a sticker or other designation honoring civil rights icon Rosa Parks during the month of February under a bill given initial approval by the House...

WBUR News 4 hours ago

Forecast: Sunshine Followed By Possible Storms

High humidity today is finally replaced by drier air late this weekend.

WBUR News 6 hours ago

Boston Children's Hospital Constructs Penis For Transgender Man — A First In Mass.

Children's is the first hospital in the state to offer what's called phalloplasty. The first patient to have the surgery, Zack Hogle, says he is now "complete."

CommonHealth 04:52 6 hours ago

'A Sense Of Freedom' For Wheelchair Racer And Her Mentor

At 9 years old, Maddie Wilson is a precocious wheelchair racing talent. Her greatest hero and mentor is Paralympian Tatyana McFadden, the most decorated female wheelchair racer in the world....

WBUR News 05:47 6 hours ago

What The Surreal Twist Ending Of 'Sorry To Bother You' Says About America Today

Boots Riley's deranged, anti-capitalist romp locates hope in horror.

The ARTery 7 hours ago

New Play Tells Stories Of Bostonians Affected By Gentrification, Displacement

"This Place/Displaced" breathes life into striking statistics on stage, but also does critical work in amplifying voices that traditionally aren't heard outside of their own communities.

The ARTery 7 hours ago

'Wherever He Was Felt Like The Center Of The Universe': Writers Remember Poet William Corbett

Poet Bill Corbett, who died last Friday at the age of 75, is being remembered as an aficionado of friendships.

The ARTery 7 hours ago

Democrats Must Fight Kavanaugh's Nomination Before It's Too Late

Liberals are concentrating on the midterms instead of on blocking Kavanaugh, writes Steve Almond, which is to say they've taken their eyes off the ball. Again.

Cognoscenti 7 hours ago

Springfield Man Found With 3 Bodies At Home Indicted On Murder Charges

Stewart Weldon was indicted by a grand jury Thursday on charges including murder, strangulation, rape and kidnapping.

WBUR News Aug 16, 2018

Pawtucket Red Sox Reach Tentative Deal To Move To Worcester

The city of Worcester and the Red Sox's top minor league affiliate have struck a tentative deal that would move the team to central Massachusetts, a source tells WBUR.

Bostonmix Aug 16, 2018

© Copyright WBUR 2018